The latest Mac OS X updates improve the application's stability, and add the ability to record audio to and from up to 16 audio channels simultaneously. The new Live Broadcast feature lets you record video while performing live, then instantly convert that footage to a video file. It's a great tool for YouTube, Vimeo, and websites that use MediaElement.js. Live Broadcast settings include volume, audio pan, camera quality, bitrate, resolution, and gamma, all of which can be easily adjusted while in use. There's also an updated Neutron Mixer that now has a wide assortment of presets and effects. Editors can now preview their projects from within the application, with support for Pre-Alpha and Red screens. Built-in Presets section is a new addition that lets you save your own mixes, with the ability to customize even further. There are also new keyboard shortcuts and two new editors, the FlexiRuler and the Rescan editor. The FlexiRuler lets you stretch or shrink the horizontal and vertical boundaries of a file, without having to re-open it first. The Rescan editor lets you quickly re-open the file by automatically opening it in Preview 82157476af
